POLITICAL REVOLUTION

CAUSES OF THE REVOLUTION. While the attitude of the President toward the tariff is undoubtedly the great cause of the remarkable defection, great cause of the remarkable defection, other acts of the Administration have driven many into the rebellious army. For example, in Broome county there are over a thousand of the most reputable Democratic citizens in Binghampton and surrounding country who voted against their party last year and will do so again in November because Mr. Cleveland. Following is the publication to the publication to the publication of a Government official, Deputy Collector Davis of this property for alleged unlawful actions in conofficial, Deputy Collector Davis of this port, for alleged unlawful actions in conductance exists in the ranks of this State. In his desperate effort to capture elements opposed to him Mr. Cleveland has ignored men who had good reason to claim recognition and appointed those who were objectionable in almost every way. Some of the most forcible examples of this are seen in the western part of the State. It is worthy of remark, however, that the majority of those who may be said to have bolted for this last reason would never have for this last reason would never have gone out had the President remained a with them a final argument for revolt. Should President Cleveland take a ew days' vacation and spend it in Buffalo, he would probably return to Washfalo, he would probably return to Wash-ington with his superb self-complacency somewhat disturbed. Certainly he would see much in the present political situation of his native city to cause him surprise and even anguish. He would find the Republicans of Eric county more united and aggressive than they have been in years; he would find his own party disorganized and discouraged. More than that he would see a large fore than that, he would see a large lement of it in open revolt, and a still More than that, he would see a large element of it in open revolt, and a still larger number quietly preparing to vote against him at the polls in November.

The revolt in this county is not only one of the most remarkable in the State, but it is one of the most alarming to the Administration. It is a distinct political movement, having an organ of its own, "The Bufalo News," which did more to make Mr. Cleveland Governor and President than any other single localizations. The News may be termed the discoverer of Cleveland. It supported him zealously when he was scarcely known outside of Eric county, boomed him as a candidate, called Daniel Manning's attention to him, and when at last he was nominated for the Presidency assisted his canvass with all the power of its 40,000 circulation.

As near as can be reliably ascertained there are over 1,000 Surflalo Democrats, representing all classes of society and departments of life who have declared

If, however, the bill is not acted upon by the 20th or 25th of October, a recess for about four weeks will be taken. This is the Republican programme, and the leaders say it will be adhered to. The bill, as now prepared, is one that the Senators are all pleased with, and it is the best that could be arranged in view of the near approach of the Presidential election. It is built upon the idea of with protection to American industries and cuts off about sixty or sixty-five million dollars of revenue.

The main features of the bill are free obacco, free alcohol for use in arts, and brandies distilled from fruits; a cut of about one-half in sugar tax, and an inarout one-mil in sugar tax, and an increase of 1 cent per pound on the finer grades of wools, with a re-classification of the schedule. Lumber and salt are left as they are in the existing law.

Many of the Senators are dissatisfied with some of the features of the bill, but the wishes of the few were subordinated to

Washington, D. C., Sept. 25.—George R. Tingle, late of Wheeling, now Government agent of fur seal islands, St. Paul and St. George Alaskan waters, is here. He has testified before the House Committee on Merchant Marine and about the alleged frauds against the government by the Alaska Commercial and Fur Seal Company taking a larger number of skins than its contract allows.

number of skins than its contract allows. A greater number than 100,000 is prohibited, but Governor', Swinford and others from Alaska, who are not in sympathy with the American-English-Alaskan fur monopoly, say this number is greatly exceeded. Colonel Tingle testified strongly in favor of the company. He told the committee, in effect, that it is all square, and the government is being fairly treated.

The company's contract expires soon and its friends are troubled over the prospect that it will not be renewed. It is commonly believed that a good many nests are being feathered out of this Alaska fur seal business, as it is highly profitable, even if legitimately conducted, while lift were not for the honesty of two government special agents, double for triple the number of skins specified in the contract might be removed, the surplus number not being subject to contract tax, and therefore enormously increasing the profits of the business. This is what the committee is driving at, but it has not mad much headway owing to the remote ness of the seal operations and the ab-sence of checks to insure the proper ex-

MR. BLAINE'S ANSWER

To Charges That Were Simply Made for Political Effect.

ROSCOE CONKLING'S LETTER

Recently Published, Mr. Blaine Evidently Believes a Forgery-Generous Words About His Old Enemy-Campaign Fake.

Augusta, Mr., Sept. 25.-The Kennebec Journal, under the head "Mr. Conk-ling and Mr. Blaine," will to-morrow publish such response as Mr. Blaine desires to make to the recently published private letter of Roscoe Conkling to his riend in New York State. Mr. Blaine was asked by the Kennebec make, and this was the response: "Nothing could induce me to enter into a conroversy over Mr. Conkling's grave. During our joint service in Congressome sixteen years in all-we had some exasperating controversies, but I never poke or wrote a word concerning him, xcept publicly, and now that he is lead, my lips are sealed against every orm of criticism or unkind expression,

When in the progress of questions and answers Mr. Blaine made several observations, as to whether Mr. Conkling was the author of the letter or not. Mr. Blaine said that he, of course, knew nothing, but it was a great surprise to him that such a letter should be use keep. Blaine said that he, of course, knew nothing, but it was a great surprise to thim that such a letter should have been written by Mr. Conkling. The date shows that the letter was written just six days after the close of an exasperating personal debate with Mr. Conkling, and if Mr. Conkling had intended to say anything of the kind he would have been apt to say it then and not immediately afterward in a private letter, which was not given to the public for twenty-two years, and not until Mr. Conkling had been dead several months. The whole affair was not in accordance with Mr. Conkling's babitual courage in debate.

When asked if he knew anything of Crandall or Haddock, Mr. Blaine replied that he had never seen either of them, and had never heard the name of either except on the occasion of his persona debate with Mr. Conkling in April, 1866. Though he had not charged his mind with the fact, so as to remember accurately, his strong impression was that they were both officers in New York under the enrollment act during the war, and that both had been dismissed from the service for misconduct in office.

Then Mr. Blaine was asked if he had anything to any about the charges that he would never seen of the efficiency in the service for misconduct in office.

Then Mr. Blaine was asked if he had anything to any about the charges that he would never heard the name of either except for misconduct in office.

Then Mr. Blaine was asked if he had anything to say about the charge that he had made money out of the recruiting funds of the war, and he replied that it might with equal truth be charged that he had made money by robbing the mails or piracy on the high seas.

Prompted further by questions, Mr. Blaine said the recruiting scandal of Maine in the last year of the war had been investigated by two committees, and one public commission (whose efforts, Mr. Blaine said, he aided), and there was, Mr. Blaine says, not a word of the war word of the war had been investigated by two committees, and one public commission (whose efforts, Mr. Blaine said, he aided), and there was, Mr. Blaine says, not a word of forts, Mr. Blaine said, he aided), and there was, Mr. Blaine says, not a word of eviderce, or even a suggestion or hint, in any one of the three reports, that he had any more connection with the matter than had Mr. Conkling or his unwiso friend who publishes this letter and attributes it to the dead statesman.

Mr. Blaine next refers to successful legislation promoted in Congress by himself in 1864 to prevent recruiting frand in all the States. Such preventive fraud in all the States. Such preventive measures, Mr. Blaine said, had been passed by eighty-four to thirty-six, the and a few Democrats like Mr. Holman, of Indiana. The negative was unanimously Democratic, concludes Mr. Blaine, and he adds, "It will thus be seen that the official record of the State and nation refutes the whole charge."

Outside a political campaign, Mr. Blaine remarked, he would never have noticed the matter, and outside a political campaign. noticed the matter, and outside a politi-cal campaign the charge would never

The extraordinary and sensational state of affairs had its origin in the fatal encounter which took place in Rio Grande City last Saturday between Catrino E. In the fight Sebree shot and killed Garsa, who was very popular all along the Rio Grande, and as a result the Mexicans rose in reand as a result the Mexicans rose in revoit and endeavored to lynch Sebree.
